LEADERSHIP AS A FORCE FOR GOOD

Leadership Dialogues at The Forum in Bath – that’s where I was yesterday.

The theme was leadership as a force for good.

And there was so much good stuff to take in and think about:

- Build your vision as a tapestry, woven with the threads of others.
- Rather than resilience, think agility.
- Agility gives us the power to seize opportunities as they arise.
- People connect with you, before they get inspired by you.
- Engage and compel people to join you and think bigger.
- Proximity unravels prejudice, unlocks empathy and unleashes champions.
- Everyone is unique, be open to the opportunities that arise from that.
- Bring people together to create something bigger than themselves.
- Imagine what the world could be, then set out to make it.
- Keep asking “what next, what else.”
- Be in the world, be courageous, take risks and start conversations without agendas.

Wow, inspiring stuff... well, for me anyway! And those are just a few snippets.

Leadership is something to consciously work on and think about that's for sure.
